The best way to temedy the cut of the year this cyll is to purilion off a small room in the harn excluded by for their use. It should be removed from horses or other stock, and the royal should be confined to their own deartificate, at least during the night. A few, fouls thus kept by their selves around bains will prove very publicable, as they will out much that would otherwise be wasted. The superiority of the country, especial-

Newspaper and books are equally accessible to each class. It is probable that ere many, your means for securacy better light at night. either by gas of electricity, will be within reach of many quantry homes. There is no reason also why the telegraph or telephone should not be extended to much homes in the more closely settled districts. The progress likely to be made in modes of country living within the next twenty years will be ground than ever before in the same period of thme.—Califering.

Country Life.

Barly winter is, after all, the most agre able season in the country. Having and baryesting no longer monopolize the pane of min and houses, and there is a great deal of social enjoyment in the toland turn houses, wherein are gathered the real wealth and true virtue of the unilon. They are the homes of the nuble dignity of Liber, where are trained up in the path of Ladistry the best of take and women, inspired with a love of Heaven, of country, and with charity for all mankind.

In the party whater rural life is exhiba-rating, then the sir braces, the walk is invigoralog, and the plan, hearty farely more than rehabilities. The best of the guillen products are not sent to the city coursets, this builder is excepted, the poultry, it is good order for the table, and oce blobally there are, spare-ribs, sausages Those who till the sall have more time to talk about their labor, and to give an lasight late practical agriculture. One's wits one brightened by the collaamil the Citizens can better approchase the real solid delight in downright country life. There are yet many housestin which hickory wood and open tireplaces look inviting, and one can even regards forther-heds and air-tight stoves in both hambers with compositic. Everything is delightful-up to the freeding point. Then, ofter Thanksgiving the citizen must go to pave streets and build bilek walls, there to do his part for the world in the winter, while the rural districts will be left to comparative enjoydistricts will be left to comparative enjoyment and leisure. And so mass the world sway, under the nill-ceing but all-pervaling power—a Problemee whose comony and whose distribution of the inbors, the blessings and the lits of life wire an according to the will be seen as a condition of the wire and wonder and reverage. It is truly the fool that leave left has heart, "There is no God,"—Exchange.

Small Economies.

Americans who travelvin France, Germany and Switzerland have remarked until their return that the waste of the inverage American family-would support one of equal size in Europe. The free fitr and had condence of Wheelea seems at you taken dependence of Marchel Seems at values with the close economy, which lexists among the European farming classes. The American farmer has the landable desire to educate his family, to live respectably and conformily, and even to sacrlifee. WM. E. MANN & CO venlence of his family. We should hardly wont to claim that the kind of success which is lauded so much among the En-rope in peacentry 1s worth its cost trans-planted to our soll. It is a wonder, howover, to an American visiting these latter classes, how they are able to exist with such slight incomes, and it is only by by close examination of their habits and methods we learn that attention to the small examples of Hearland accommission. small economies of life alone accomplishes tha result.

There is andoubtedly a measure of economy in small things which may be drawn half any between the stinted means of the European peasant and the extravagance of the average American family which would be better at least for the latter. Money is not worth the sucrifice of manhood nor the terrible competition with domb beasts which have alibited among the poorer chances in 'rural France' and Germany, Yet suceess, even in America, with its large possi-bilities, must ever depend upon properly directed economy.

A recent traveller in Switzdriand in discussing this subject writes that he was astonished at the awkward ways of doing things in that country. He had no idea that outside of Egypt such primitive principles of Egypt such primitive principles.
